

Helene's Married Life

By May Christie

(Copyright, 19290, McClure Syndicate.)

XL.-Who Is Amy?

For unless I'm mightily mistaken you don't trifle with the hearts of men."

This was a poser, certainly! But anything to divert his mind from the use to which those flowers had "I hope I'm not a firt." My voice held a provocative note, I knew.

Though they do say that the most charming women are coquettes by mature!

"Not a true woman, such as you, MissHelene," rejoined my compan-ion, with ridiculous earnestness. This comment proved to me he had no sense of humor. A man bores me, too, who can't at certain times be flippant. The lack of proportion in Travis Lloyd's make-up was rather disappointing. A little silence fell between us It was at this crucial moment that lim's mother came into the room.

"Oh. I didn't know you were all at dinner." She flushed—and the flush on her sweet, middle ged face was vastly becoming. "I just came down to thank Miss Helene-"For what?" said Alice brightly. "For the lovely flowers-the videts and carnations-Jim is just reveling in their beauty! It was my turn to flush. And indeed I was oddly disconcerted. For at my elbow sat Travis Lloyd, the giver of the flowers that I'd passed on to Jim!

Mrs. St. Aubyns retired, and Alice flung a mischievous glance in my direction. Her scrutiny, too, was east on Travis Lloyd. And then she blundered to my rescue, making matters all the worse! "Dear Helene is so interested in our charming visitor," she cooed, in tones so low that no one but myself and Travis Lloyd could hear her "She didn't wish to part with your exquisite bouquet, but I persuaded her that the invalid's need was eater than her own! And, Mr.

creater than her own: And Lil.yd, you must admit that Helene requires no beautifying!" I could willingly have slapped Alice for her nonsense! Miss Helene is at perfect liberty to do as she pleases with my gifts," rejoined my dinner partner in tones of injured dignity. He applied himself to the consumption of his oysers a dish that one can't eat entirely gracefully! And so the dig-nified effect was lost. As for me, I decided not to worry. me flowers. And after all, they'd troubles in the coming autumn. nquired our hostess, after the interminable meal was ended. She avoided her husband's eye, mean-Travis Lloyd and I said nothing. He was waiting for my cue. I knew. But the other couple eagerly assented, so that Alice's husband sould not possibly protest. "You must excuse me," he said. "Nor do I," I added quickly, anxous to escape.

Here—to my chagrin—Travis Lloyd cut in. "Miss Helene, if, you don't play, we adjourned to the wide hall where a great log fire burned. In a cosy corner, the bridge table was set forth, and the players began their game. I could see by Alice's pritated countenance, however, that social obligations of life than ever there would be no money stakes before in this year of 1920.

that night! Over her husband's head | Children born on this da "I shall hear about this in the

He actually smiled. His complaency scemed quite restored.
"It's an ill wind that blows no ne any good." He touched my arm. This gives us an opportunity to secome better acquainted, doesn't It did. indeed. But I wasn't crazy strides along the road of love. He led me to the far end of the hall, found a wide divan, and we "I hope that you'll stay in this part of the country for some considerable time, Miss Helene," he be-

"I've promised to help Alice nurse the invalid," I rejoined. This information might prove a cold douche

But it didn't. He rubbed his ands delightedly. "Oh, that's splendid. So unselfish of you. And—his recovery is bound to be rather slow, I take it?" I frowned. I thought this remark

Are You a Booster?

Community Service

which stands for bringing out the greatest efficiency in all community activities. Here

D. C. COMMUNITY SERVICE, 918 TENTH ST. N. W.

a member of and a co-worker in

If you are, you are invited to become

A sense of guilt crept over me when Travis Lloyd inquired about his flowers.

"Oh yes—thanks a thousand times—I did receive them!" I said, quick—such a pity about the accident."

Then a queer look crossed his face as he remarked:

"You never did find out the reactive them."

ly, nervously. "They're unstairs. I expect they are in water by this time. It seemed a shame to wear them. Besides, flowers fade so quickly on me!"

"I won't make the obvious answer," he replied, smiling again. "And, anyway, I don't think it fits!

"And, anyway, I don't think it fits!

"Ear-unless I'm mightly mistaken." A prestary!"

At that moment Alice motioned

Mr. Lloyd across the hall. She leaned back from the card table, beckoning him. Asking to be excused, he left me for a moment, to discover Alice's re-

It was then I noticed a tiny scrat of paper lying on the floor. Me-chanically I lifted it, and as mechanically my eye glanced at the small, cramped writing on the frag-

"Enclosed you will find my usual check," I read. "Please see that Amy is provided with every lux-Below this mysterious sentence came the signature of "Travis Lloyd." I stared at the torn scrap of paper utterly bewildered and surprised. "Amy—" His "usual check—"

What did it mean? The mystery of Travis Lloyd was thickening:

Tomorrow-A Crumpled Paper. The stars incline, but do not compel.

HOROSCOPE.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 10, 1920. Copyright, 1920, by The McClure Newspaper

Juniter rules strongly for good during the late hours of this day, according to astrology. Neptune is in threatening mood.

In the evening plans for buying and selling should be very lucky. Trade and commerce will be well directed while this configuration prevails. One of the signs of the times will be the tendency of men and women to simplify the usual activities of and to tell you the truth, he did not very brilliant, the most penetrating their lives and to avoid what is unseem to mind very much. necessary in the way of daily routine. have a decided effect upon social cus- places.

The planet that encourages a love of luxuries has had much power during influence the human mind in coming gily. weeks when economies may be im-

Discontent over diminishing wages in I hadn't asked Mr. Lloyd to send certain vocations may lead to serious > office within a month. traordinary national problem. Deceit and treachery are believed to be made easy by the aspect of Neptune which is dominant today. Persons of chattered Billie. goods reputation may develop tendencies that lead to misrepresentation and even dishonesty.

Children born on this day may be untidy and careless in dress. These subjects of Pisces are often idealistic morning," I remarked to Travis and imaginative. (Copyright, 1920, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

PASTEL SUEDE GLOVES POPULAR.

Many smart women are now wearing pastel suede gloves. Most rubbed. for that opportunity. Mr. Travis of the new 20-button evening edge, it may be reversed tacking the lower edge to the roller, and trides along the road of love. ventional floral design on the arm. The fad, however, is not confined to the ballroom. Pastel suedes are being worn extensively at afternoon functions as well.

> JELLY MADE FROM IVORY. quently prescribed for the sick in lighter tones will be popular. England is that made of elephant tusks. Quantities of ivory dust accumulate in English factories, where many tons of tusks are sawed annually. This dust, which is sold at sixpence a pound, makes a fine, pure jelly when properly boiled and

CHILDREN'S SUNRISE STORIES

UNCLE WIGGILY AND BILLIE'S SAIL Ay HOWARD R. GARIS

Down came the rain, all over everything in Woodland, near the Orange Ice Mountains, where Uncle Wiggily was staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bushytail, the squirrel folk. And, as the rain came down, it froze, covering everything with a sheet of slippery steet. 'Oh, dear me!' chatted Mrs. Bushytail. "I shalln ever be able to go to the store this morning!"

"What did you want from the store?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"I wanted some calloo to make little jackets for Billie and Johnnie," spoke Mrs. Bushytail. "But it is sov ery slippery, and the rain is freezing as fast as it comes down, so I don't see how I shall be able to get to the eight and nine cent store, said the squirrel lady.

"I'll go for you," offered the bunny rabbit gentleman. "I love to be "But this storm is so terrible!" exclaimed Nurse Jane.

By this time Johnnie had found his books and had hurried off to Hurry, Billie, or you'll be late," called Mrs. Bushytail to her other quirrel boy.

"I'm looking for my spelling ook," said Billie. "It has a lot of hard words in I learned for the lady mouse teacher." "And because it has such hard words in it, I suppose that is why it is so hard to find," laughed Un-le Wiggily. "I'll help you, Billie."

Mrs. Bushytail said: "I'm sure you'll be late for school, Billie." "I'll go with him and harry him along," offered Uncle Wiggily, "I'll go now and get you the calico. Soon Uncle Wiggily and Billie, the squirrel chap, started out together. The rain had now changed to snow and this, falling on the frozen sleet, slippery as the frozen duck pond "I guess the only way for us to do is to slide," said Uncle Wiggily. "I haven't forgotten how." So the rabbit gentleman and the had made the paths and fields as little squirrel boy began to slide, one on his way to school and the other to go to the eleven and tweive cent store. Uncle Wigigly would slide forward two steps and then he would slip back three steps.

And Billie would slide along seven lown wife. steps and then slip back eight steps. "Oh, I'll never get to school this chattered Billie with a laugh, "Yes, it is slippery, and we don't manage, Billie!" "How?" asked the squirrel boy. "We can turn around and go full of feeling/and expression. the last year and will continue to backward," suggested Uncle Wig-"Then the more we slip back the nearer the twelve and thirteen cent store, and the hollow stump chool, we shall be."

And they did. cheered Jim up. That was all that really mattered, to my mind.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Shall we play bridge?" languidly in the coming autumn.

"Now you had better hurry on to death of possessing cunning in his in the coming autumn.

"Now you had better hurry on to death of possessing cunning in his in the coming autumn.

"And I'll go back home." But now something else happened. Uncle Wiggily and Billie could not Panks have the prognostication of Uncle Wiggily and Billie could not some sudden difficulty due to an exped, stumbled and slid all over but in the right direction.

"If we only had umbrellas we eyed men of music, and Michael Anter, of course, those blue Austrian could hoist them, hold our feet still gelo had exceedingly small eyes, eyes, small and cold, were regarded and then we would be blown along which shows that large eyes are no with anything but admiration. Thoughts should be safeguarded as just like ice boats," said Uncle Wig-

Thoughts should be saleguarded as gily.

never before, the seers warn, for there gily.

"But we have something just as

So this teaches us that even onions have some uses in this world. And if the canary bird doesn't take the sugar spoon out of the cake basket to slide down the ironing board on and tickle the gas stove's legs, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and Johnnie's jack.

WINDOW SHADES CAN BE CLEANED.

A widow shade may be cleaned with a commercial paper cleaner, or with dry flour or starch applied with a rough flannel cloth. shade should be tacked to a table or to the floor before being or to If it is faded at the lower

Medium Shades Prove Popular. So far this season afternoon frocks of the best mode in georgette, chiffon cloth and other airy materials are in medium tones, such A jelly which is said to be fre- Burgundy. Later, it is predicted,

Fashionable Nancy

New Chiffon Creation For Days of Summer Sunshine

mer in memory. This year designers conventional blue flower at the side are favoring chiffons and tulles of the front. The crown is shirred with brims drooping to shade the in upon cords at intervals.

leyes. Constance Binney wears New York's Fashion Authority. large hat of shell-pink chiffon which New York .- When small, trim illustrates the mode, Low over the hats of spring lose their charm as eyes, and flaring slightly higher in the days lengther into any the back, the hat is trimmed only the days lengthen into real summer, with a band of blue grosgrain rib But it took such a long time that soft, frilly hats will be ready to take bon of medium width at the base their place, as they have every sum- of the crown, and one upstanding

IS THIS YOUR TYPE?

By MARIE LA ROQUE Copyright, 1920, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Have You Small Eyes?

Moliere in "Le Bourgeois Gentil- [are always mentioned as small when is known to be patterned after his She has small eyes, objects one True, returns th champion of her beauty, "but they are full of fire, and the most touching in the world. And that is the case of small eyes It has been prophesied that the true-value of time would be appreciated as spoke Uncle Wiggily, as he took five anywhere with small eyes, though it never before and that this fact would slides ahead and went back ten is the large eye that is accounted "But I know how we can more beautiful, but if you are going to get along with small eyes they must be eyes of fire, very brilliant,

There are those who say that small eyes betoken cunning. Nonsense! Didn't Patrick Henry have small eyes, and didn't John Mar-"Oh. let's do it" chattered Billie. shall? And could anyone accuse the outspoken Virginian who called devoted his superb endowment of judicial and analytical abilities entirely to the good of his country, of beng a man of mean disposition?

"Oh. I shall never get to school," are Tolstoy. Ibsen and Whitman, won considerable admiration from hattered Billie.

Chopin and Beethoven are small- the dark-eyed French populace. Lamore necessary to painting than to It is no exaggeration to say that the other arts. orbs were all but lost to view.

was Marie Antoinette, whose eyes had eyes that were markedly small.

nomme" describes a character who they are mentioned at all, though they were pleasing eyes of a clear

Among small-eyed folk who wrote light blue that seem at first to have in a general way the more brilliant And you really don't have to have the painter the more apt he is someman as ne looked at the bundle of calico cloth under his paw. "I'll obscurity and rags and a pittance a stincts may be more common than ever before, and for this reason the stourth, my dear—and don't let's argue over it! Come on!"

We adjourned to the more than level to lascinate. There times to put on his canvases beautiful women whose eyes are small obscurity and rags and a pittance a rather than large. For it is the natural, simple, childlike thing to paint ural, simple, childlike thing to paint on the call obscurity and rags and a pittance a rather than large. For it is the natural, simple, childlike thing to paint on the call obscurity and rags and a pittance a rather than large. For it is the natural, simple, childlike thing to paint on the call obscurity and rags and a pittance a rather than large. For it is the natural, simple, childlike thing to paint on the call obscurity and rags and a pittance a rather than large. For it is the natural, simple, childlike thing to paint obscurity and rags and a pittance a rather than large. For it is the natural, simple, childlike thing to paint obscurity and rags and a pittance a rather than large. For it is the natural obscurity and rags and a pittance a rather than large. For it is the natural obscurity and rags and a pittance a rather than large. For it is the natural obscurity and rags and a pittance a rather than large. For it is the natural obscurity and rags and a pittance a rather than large. For it is the natural obscurity and rags and a pittance a rather than large. For it is the natural obscurity and rags and a pittance a rather than large. For it is the natural obscurity and rags and a pittance a rather than large. good!" exclaimed the bunny gentle-man as he looked at the bundle of was Eleanor Gwynn, who rose from tiful women whose eyes are small She was accounted the most charm- tist of the decadent period in Italy ing, most beautiful, most vivacious, as well as among the makers of And yet, her eyes were small indeed, magazine covers of today-both, no so small, in fact, that when she doubt, catering to the popular taste. laughed, which she did often, those Among the canvases of Valasquez and Rembrandt you will find many Not infrequently we hear the with smaller eyes that were doubtlarge, full eye referred to as the less more realistic. And don't forqueenly eye. Just why it is hard to get that Saskia-the wife of Remtell. Perhaps because it looks like brandt, whose beauty exercised more the sort of eye that most persons influence over the great Dutch mas-think queens ought to have. There ter than that of any other—Saskia

REMODELING A WIFE

A Story of Married Life Where the Husband Would Be a Creator By MILDRED K. BARBOUR. Copyright, 1920, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

LXII.—The Inevitable Reckoning.

again by the following morning and I was ill, you know, and it esdeeply thankful that her indisposition had averted another domestic quabble. Stewart was very tender to her and brought her flowers and novels after her own taste. She ap- doorway. One glance at his face preciated the concession, realizing told Doris that he had heard. how it must have hurt him to order them at a bookshop.

For almost a week things ran along smoothly. Doris was very docile and meekly obeyed her husband's slightest suggestion. "She is learning at last," he told Margaret exultantly.

"Learning what?" queried Margaret absently. Carrington regarded his sister in surprise. "Why-learning that I am better able to direct her than she is herwalk or phone for Weston?" Car-rington's icy calm frightened Doris Margaret nodded with the de-tached air she had worn of late. "She is not loking very strong."

the table, straightened a chair, and lated:

fluffed up a cushion, but Doris was deep in the trials of a martyr heroine and gave the maid no attention.

With a sinking heart Doris took deep in the trials of a martyr heroine and gave the maid no attention.

Jane gave a slight cough and said the proffered sheets. One was a crisply rendered sheets.

Doris was feeling quite herself | got all about owing you that money. caped my mind completely." "That's for interest," she laughed.

And thanks for the loan." Scarcely had the maid left the room, when Carrington stood in the "Will you be good enough to tell me what this latest madness means?" he asked with a dangerous calm of compressed lips. when have you developed the habit of borowing money from servants?" Doris sat down quickly on the couch to hide her trembling.

"The day of Juliet's tea." she gasped, "I needed half a dollar to pay for a taxi-nobody was home and Jane offered-"And you borrowed from a servant rather than take a street car or more than his usual display of wrath. "It was only 50 cents," she began "Too much society," returned Carrington carelessly. "She has done a great deal more this winter than ever before in her life and she is not getting the outdoor exercise that she should. You know that she would rather sit in a stuffy theatre or read before the fire with a box of ripped them open."

"It was only 50 cents," she began pathetically, but her husband's exclamation cut her off. He had turned to fing himself out of the room when his eye caught the letters lying on the salver on the table. He picked them up, scanned the address with a frown, and or read before the fire with a box of ripped them open.

The face he turned to Doris was Jane, bringing up the afternoon livid with anger. He held out two mail, lingered unaccountably. She wiped a bit of imaginary dust from the table districted a chair and lated.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

By MILDRED MARSHALL Facts about your name; its his-tory; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel.

ETHEL

Ethel is in itself a name, but it has so many suffixes as to seem almost a syllable itself. It is another of the Teutonic names which Aethel, the same prefix which, in had been brought for alienation of German, is Adal, from which comes the affections. Adelaide. The early feminine form of this simple little name was Aethelthryth. Another, less complex, love away from ner, atto demwas Ediltrud.

Teutonic and Norse tradition seem to merge somewhere along the course of Ethel's history, for the splendor of the Valkyr lingers in the name. It was popular among the women of those olden times, because it signified the ideal woman of the period when "a resolute will and a strong hand were woman's best title to respect," as one writer puts it. Nowadays Ethel, shorn of her complexities, suggests a fluffy feminine name, rather than an Amazonian ideal. Saint Aethelthryth was a queen of she-loses her husband's love.

the Amazon type, who must have the Amazon type, who must have been a very uncomfortable sort of relative value of masculine and his safety valve, his salve spreader, wife, and who finally retired to a feminine love gives us pause for his sparring partner, his standing the salve spreader. monastery. She was canonized as thought. Yet when we consider excuse for everything he does and Saint Ethelreda. Her saintly name the difference between the quantity omits to do, and for him to be degree of popularity, but Ethelberta we can but agree that it was noth and Ethelfreda are much the favor- ing more than just that the penall and stands alone as an inde-pendent name. It is not only pleasin contrast to other forms of the Alberta and Albertine are regard-ed as other offsprings of Ethèl. Ethel should wear an agate if she her lucky number. The wild rose (Copyright, 1920, by Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

STENOGRAPHY IN CONSTANTINOPLE

Typewriting, commercial arithmetic, business English, and now stenography, are among the classes offered by the American Y. W. C. A. in Constantinople. The course in stenography has just been opened at the earnest request of the girls of her looks, her health, her high spirthe association, according to a let- its. If he is devoted to her, and ter just received at Y. W. C. A. faithful to her still after she gets headquarters in New York City. In old, and fat, and grizzled headed, spite of the great difficulty of learn- or becomes a peevish invalid, everying shorthand in a language only one marvels at his constancy-and partly familiar, these Armenian and it is the consensus of public opinion Turkish girls are eager to attempt it. There is a considerable demand and it seems a dignified and desirable occupation to young women who useful. Typewriters are so scarce in that city that the Y. W. C. A. is forced to depend upon its "brother assolation," the Y. M. C. A., for equipnent for typewriting classes.

:: Excellent Advice ::

By DOROTHY DIX Highest-Paid Woman Writer.

Which Is Worth the More-A Wife's or a Husband's Love?

signify noble, and is derived from tained accounts of two suits that but is no priceless jewel. On the other hand, a wife's affec-

> In the other case a husband sued a man for robbing him of his wife's heart, and the jury assessed the husband's damages at $10,000 From this it would appear that what is sentimental sauce for the her husband is four times as valuable as his love for her, and that a constant curiosity and wonder when he loses her affection he has all who observe it, and that is sustained four times as great a valuable beyond all reckoning. misfortune as a wife does when

In one, a wife sued another woman for stealing her husband's love away from her, and the jury

the difference between the quanti- omits to do, and for him to be ty of woman's love and man's love robbed of all of that aggregation has come down to us with a small ty of woman's love and man's love, other constituted high robbery and misdemeanor and was punished as

Reflect upon the manner which man loves and the way in which woman loves. "Man's love wishes happiness and success. Ac-cording to its promise, it will bring woman's whole existence." "Men her the desire of her heart, give have died, and worms have eaten achieve success, or save money, or her courage and a dauntless will, them, but not for love." Thus de-hold a big job until after they get Thursday is her lucky day and four clare the poets, and nobody has ever married. It is when a man has a disproved the assertion. A man wife whom he loves and for whom his heart that is not set upon him- and fine houses, that he rolls up self: the fraction of his interest his sleeves and does the work that that is not devoted to his work in counts. his career; the portion of his time that is not taken up by business or golf, or his other pursuits. Man's affection is a bit of chiffon that he drapes about a woman when she is young and pretty. It is a lovely thing, but it lacks wearing qualities, for the most part. As a general thing a husband's love for his wife depends on her age. that he should be given the Croix de Guerre of Matrimony.

In view of the evanescent quality of masculine affection it is easy to see why the wives who sue sirens never before done anything for vamping their husbands never hold that they are entitled to them, or consider that they have lost anything very valuable. The most they thing entrusted to their care. it have been robbed of is a pinchback breastpin that may have been ject on earth. Hers is the love that is all wool and a yard wide, and that is guaranteed not to run, nor shrink, nor fade in the wash, and to stand the wear and tear of life. can be faithful to the faithless. She can fish a man out of the gutter. wash him clean with her tears, and set him up on a pedestal and make a little tin god of him. So he who possesses a woman's heart has not goose is not rich enough sauce for only a source of daily comfort and the gander; that a wife's love for strength and sustaining, but he has also a piece of bric-a-brac that is misfortune as a wife does when she loses her husband's love. his caterer, his laundress, his valet, The jury's appraisement of the his conscience, his savings bank, of conveniences is to leave him poor and desolate indeed.

In the old romantic days a man in love proved his devotion by putting on his armor, mounting his batsteed and faring forth to do deeds of valor for his lady love. In these times the man in love proves his devotion by hustling out and making money, or getting sor where, to prove his affection for the woman he loves.

Comparatively few men ever gives to his wife the fragment of he wants limousines, and diamonds

There is a direct ratio between a man's earning ability and what he thinks of his wife, for men cash in their affections in dollars and cents. And, curiously enough, just as a man's love for his wife leads him to prosperity, an unlawful love nearly always spells disaster to him, and many a man's bankruptcy and ruin has begun in his flirtations. It is because domestic affection means peace, and happiness, and a calm mind, and ambition, and prosperity that a wife's love is so valuable, and the man who is robbed of it has lost his chief worldly possession, and is entitled to such compensation as the courts can give But, as a matter of cold fact, not many men or women are really robbed of their wife's or husband's afget big damages. Juries do not their own carelessness, and if they had been attending to watching and guarding the precious would have been safe from the depredations of sneak thieves.

Furniture At Prices That Make Economy Easy Is What You Get At HOPKINS

3-Piece Bed Outfit

Bed, guaranteed link Spring and soft top and bottom Mattress. Complete.....

Layer Mattress All Cotton-felt Mattress. Fancy art ticking. A wonderful value

Wonderful values. Porcelain tops; all-white enamel. Metal Bread Box. Special at.....

9x11 Ft. Matting Rugs CHOICE, WHILE 100 OF THEM LAST

-Every Rug Is in Perfect Condition. At this special low price it will pay you to anticipate your needs for the summer.

Cash Credit is my application for membership: FILL OUT AND MAIL AT ONCE TO